AT THE CENTRE

Global zoo network

ANTZ is designed to express a connected international system of institutions, expertise and responsibility.

One ecosystem. Many institutions.

The central idea behind the logo is not only the individual animals, but the relationship between them. Each symbol can be interpreted as a different institution, species focus, discipline or role within a wider conservation community.

One zoo may specialise in primates, another in marine life, another in bird welfare, another in habitat restoration, and another in research and public engagement. Yet all belong to a shared mission: to protect biodiversity, improve welfare standards, and build a more informed world.

In that sense, the ANTZ logo becomes a map of global cooperation. It represents a network of institutions learning from one another, supporting one another, and acting together for the benefit of wildlife and society.

01

Connected

Institutions collaborate across geography and expertise.

02

Shared

Knowledge, care and standards travel across networks.

03

Evidence-led

Scientific thinking guides each action and decision.

04

Global

Every habitat, species and institution sits within one larger system.

Can you spot the elephant in the logo mark?

It lives in the space inside the 'a'. The flying bird at the centre is its eye, the ear sweeps out to the left, and the trunk falls along the right, sweeps round above the crocodile and curls up at the tip.
